7. Narrative Description

This is a two-story, two-bay frame house that sits on a molded concrete block foundation. The walls are clad in weatherboards. The gable roof is clad in asphalt shingles. This house is eclectic in style having both Queen Anne and Foursquare influences.

The front (north) elevation includes a wood porch, with low brick walls and brick columns. The porch roof is fairly flat and is clad in asphalt shingles. The first story includes an entry with a metal storm door plus a historic wood door in the left bay. The right (west) bay consists of a two-story angled bay window, with three one-over-one-light double-hung wood windows. The second story of the bay window also has three one-over-one-light double-hung wood windows. There are also three windows set together in the left bay, with a somewhat larger window flanked by two smaller windows. One of the windows is a one-over-one-light double-hung wood window. The other small window and the large window appear to be one-light wood windows. A wide frieze with dentils extends across the elevation. The corner of the gable-front roof at the side of the bay window is supported by a decorative bracket. The bottom of the gable has a low roof that projects over the bay window and remainder of the façade. The gable has three similarly sized wood windows set together, with the outer windows appearing to be leaded glass. The gable is clad in fishscale shingles.

The east elevation has three windows, with one window on each the first and second story near the rear of the elevation. The third window is located in between the first and second stories, likely along the stairs. The windows all have one-over-one-light double-hung wood sashes. The enclosed side of the one-story rear porch has no openings on this side.

The west elevation on the first story has a square bay window that projects only about one foot from the house. It has four original one-over-one-light double-hung wood windows with metal storm windows. The second story has two windows with one-over-one-light double-hung wood sashes.

The south elevation has a rear one-story section that is original to the house, according to the Sanborn maps. The east end was enclosed sometime after 1946, according to Sanborn maps. This one story section has an entry with a metal storm door, and a wood door that faces south. The one story section also has a one-over-one-light double-hung window with wood sashes that faces south on the enclosed section. The second story on this elevation, the main part of the home, has two one-over-one-light double-hung wood windows. The rear gable has a one-over-one-light double-hung wood window. The rear gable is not covered in shingles like the front gable.

There is a garage at the back of the property along the alley, and it faces south. The garage is one-story and is two bays wide. The foundation is concrete and the walls are clad in wood. The hip-roof is clad in asphalt shingles. There is one pedestrian entry on the north elevation. There are two windows (one on each the east and west elevations), but they are covered by wood. This garage like many on this block was built between 1919 and 1928, according to Sanborn Maps.

8. Narrative Statement of Significance

The Justin Coe House appears to be individually eligible for the National Register of Historic Places under Criteria C, but not A or B. It also appears to be a contributing building in a potential "West Hill" historic neighborhood district.

This house appears to be an excellent example of transitional architecture. The house, which was built in 1904, was a time of change in popular styles, with the Queen Anne fading in popularity and the Foursquare was gaining in popularity. This house has Queen Anne influence in the asymmetrical façade, patterned surfaces, and bay windows. The rest of the house has a square shape, with layout of rooms being two rooms wide and two rooms deep. There appear to be few examples of this type of transitional architecture in Muscatine, and this appears to be the best example of this type of transitional architecture in this potential district. There may be other examples of the Foursquare and Queen Anne hybrid in the community, but these areas have not been surveyed as of yet. In any case, whether there are any other similar hybrids or not, the integrity of the Justin Coe House is strong. The original weatherboards and windows are intact. There have been no additions, although a small portion of the back porch has been enclosed. The wire-cut brick columns/wall added to the porch appears to be a historic change. Thus the Justin Coe House appears to be individually eligible under Criterion C.

Justin Coe, who owned lot 9 and lived in the house (414) on the west half of the lot, decided in 1904 to build this bigger more expensive house on the east side of the lot. Justin Coe was a well known businessman, with his bookstore, but he was no more prominent than many other businessmen at the time. There have been no particularly important people that have lived at this house since Coe. Thus, this house does not appear individually eligible for the National Register of Historic Places under Criterion B. Likewise, there are no particularly significant events associated with this house. It was built in this neighborhood during the period of the early 20th century that many vacant spaces were filled with houses. Thus, it does not appear to be individually eligible under Criterion A.

Additionally, the Justin Coe House does appear to be a contributing building in a potential "West Hill" neighborhood historic district. It falls within one historic context for the district: "20th century residential and neighborhood. This house was built during a period of housing demand in the early 20th century that led to the construction of many new houses. This house was built by the owner, who then moved into this house and rented out his initial house. Thus, this house reflects the increased density of the neighborhood in the early 20th century as well as the trend toward rental units to satisfy housing demand.

Justin Coe, who owned lot 9 and lived in the house (414) on the west half of the lot, decided in 1904 to build this bigger more expensive house on the east side of the lot. Justin Coe was a well known businessman with his bookstore, but he was no more prominent than many other businessmen at the time. There have been no particularly important people that have lived at this house. Thus, this house does not appear to be individually eligible for the National Register of Historic Places under Criterion B.

Likewise, the property is not associated with any particularly significant events. It was built during the early 20th century, when other lots without houses were built in the West Hill neighborhood. It does not appear to be individually eligible for the National Register of Historic Places under Criterion A.

Justin Coe apparently built this house in 1904. City Directories show that Justin Coe had lived next door at 414 West 4th Street through 1904, and Sanborn Maps show a house on this half of the lot first in 1905. The first city directory after the house was built (1907), shows Justin Coe living here. Justin Coe had lived and owned 414 since 1887 (Lots Book 21: 389), and apparently built this bigger home after retiring from his successful bookstore business. Mr. Coe had established his bookstore and stationary store in Muscatine in 1865, after serving in Company H in the Iowa infantry during the Civil War (Portrait and Biographical Album 1889: 273-74). The 1910 Census shows Justin Coe (70, retired) living with his wife Ellen (66) and daughter Hellen (25, school teacher) at this address. Mr. Coe lived at 412 thru 1911, when he moved back to 414 West 4th Street, which he still owned.

Mr. Coe continued to own the house at 412 W. 4th Street, but rented it out to a Dr. M.A. Barr, a surgeon, as shown in the city directories from 1913 thru 1919. The census for 1920 shows a Dr. Milton Barr (51, osteopathic physician), with his wife Anna (44), and his son Robert (17) renting this house.

In March 1920, Adam Schuessler bought the house from Justin Coe (Lots Book 53: pg.717). In just under a year, in February 1921, Frank and Catherine Eichelberger bought the house from the Schuessler's and they moved in (Lots Book 56: pg. 608). Frank Eichelberger was initially listed as a truck driver in the 1921 and 1923-1924 directories, then as retired in the 1927 directory, and then as a farmer starting in 1929. In 1920, he had been listed as a 32-year-old farmer in Lake Township, Muscatine County, with his wife Catherine (23) and daughter Hannah (1). Starting in 1952, Frank's wife Catherine is listed solely as a resident of this house; however, no death or divorce records can be found for Frank. There is a death record for Frank's father in 1955, for which Frank is listed as the informant of his father's death.
